

Liberal Arts College Lecture Series

'JUST RIGHT' OR 'JUST WRONG': INDIVIDUALS AND MORAL CHOICE

Thursday January 25, 2018 at 7:30 pm

1455 De Maisonneuve Blvd. W., Room H-1220,
Political Science conference room

How do human beings make choices involving moral dimensions? Professor Haas departs from traditional philosophical views to propose a neuroeconomic model of moral choice. Her account helps explain how moral choice develops in individual agents, including where the feeling that something is 'just right' or 'just wrong' comes from, and why moral tenets affect individuals differently at different times.

Julia Haas tries to understand how people make decisions. She received her PhD in Philosophy at Emory University and was the McDonnell Postdoctoral Fellow at Washington University in St. Louis. She is currently an Assistant Professor at Rhodes College in Memphis, TN. She graduated from the Liberal Arts College in 2008 and can't wait to visit.

Free Admission

Telephone: 514 848-2424 ext. 2565

